FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Dear Friends,

What a momentous day it was when we finally heard the words of the Prime Minister expressing the National Apology to the Stolen Generations. Parliament's unanimous support for that motion of apology on 13 February served to emphasise the importance of the occasion.

The word sorry, said three times, acknowledged the deep pain and suffering caused by the policies of forced separation of Indigenous children from their families. And in saying sorry, the dignity and respect for an ancient culture, and the damage done to it, were also acknowledged:

'For the pain, suffering and hurt of these Stolen Generations, their descendants and for their families left behind, we say sorry.

'To the mothers and the fathers, the brothers and the sisters, for the breaking up of families and communities, we say sorry.

'And for the indignity and degradation thus inflicted on a proud people and a proud culture, we say sorry.' (refer: http://www.pm.gov.au/media/Speech/2008/speech\_0073.cfm)

Archbishop Philip Wilson, President of the Australian Catholic Bishops Conference, welcomed the Apology as 'an historic and prophetic moment in the life of the Australian nation' and recalled the Catholic Bishops' apology of 1998. The Archbishop said, 'A decade on, we reaffirm the sentiments expressed in that statement, that "the Catholic Bishops of Australia wish to record our commitment to continue the healing process for the benefit of victims of the unjust policies of the past, to support the just needs of Indigenous people today and to contribute to the quest for national reconciliation".'

Highlighting the progress needed in the broader work of National Reconciliation, he said, 'For true healing to take place we must also acknowledge that this National Apology is a point not only of arrival, but a point of hope and a point of departure.

'Having arrived at this point of healing, we must not fall into the trap of thinking that reconciliation is complete and our obligations as a nation are fulfilled. Rather, we must take the hope that this Apology represents and move forward, determined to increase our efforts to improve the practical circumstances of our Indigenous brothers and sisters.

'This must be done by addressing the fundamental causes of entrenched disadvantage, in full consultation and collaboration with Indigenous communities.

Appropriate resources must be made available to achieve real outcomes,' the Bishops' Statement said. (refer: <http://www.acbc.catholic.org.au/bishops/confpres/200802131369.htm>)

Unfinished business

There remains the question of compensation. This is part of the challenge of implementing the recommendations of the Bringing Them Home report, which was released by the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission in 1997. That report recommended 'that reparation be made to all who suffered because of forcible removal policies'.

In particular, the report recommended that reparation should consist of:

1. acknowledgement and apology;
2. guarantees against repetition;
3. measures of restitution;
4. measures of rehabilitation; and
5. monetary compensation.

(Recommendation 3)

It recommended that reparation be made to:

1. individuals who were forcibly removed as children;
2. family members who suffered as a result of their removal;
3. communities which, as a result of the forcible removal of children, suffered cultural and community disintegration; and
4. descendants of those forcibly removed who, as a result, have been deprived of community ties, culture and language, and links with and entitlements to their traditional land. (Recommendation 4)

The proposed 'National Compensation Fund' would be administered by a Board consisting of Indigenous and non-Indigenous people appointed by the Council of Australian Governments and in consultation with Indigenous organisations and individuals. (refer: http://www.hreoc.gov.au/social\_justice/bth\_report/index.html)

Subsequently, the Senate Legal and Constitutional References Committee, in its 2000 Report - Healing: A Legacy of Generations - also recommended the establishment of a 'Reparations Tribunal' to provide an effective process of reparation. (refer: http://www.aph.gov.au/Senate/committee/legcon\_ctte/completed\_inquiries/1999-02/stolen/report/index.htm)

Among various groups and officials now calling for the recommendations of Bringing Them Home to be implemented and the issue reparations to be placed back on the national agenda is Tom Calma, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner of the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission. He has called for all States and Territories, and the Commonwealth Government, to follow Tasmania's example of legislating for a compensation scheme. Queensland and Western Australia have also set up some schemes. (refer: <http://www.abc.net.au/news/stories/2008/01/23/2144601.htm>)

Interviewed after the delivery of the Apology, Patrick Dodson said that services or benefits specifically made to members of the Stolen Generations, particularly for those in remote communities, would bring a practical benefit and could be regarded as an element of reparation. He gave the example of extending something like the military service gold-card as a way for the Government and the people of Australia to say that, as a nation, we are going to take care of members of the Stolen Generations. (refer: <http://www.abc.net.au/pm/content/2008/s2162037.htm>)

Amid the wide ranging debate and various proposals that will be made, it is apparent from previous experience that the establishment of a method of reparations outside the legal system will be less painful and costly to victims than the alternative of having to pursue compensation through the courts.

A bi-partisan commitment

It is hoped that the Apology will inspire a renewed and united commitment to move beyond the current law and order approach of the Northern Territory intervention to address the fundamental causes of family and social breakdown, as well as the denial of social and economic opportunities to Indigenous communities.

The Prime Minister announced a special joint committee of Parliament, to be co-chaired by the Leader of the Opposition, to develop and implement an effective housing strategy for remote communities over five years. The Prime Minister called it 'a new partnership for closing the gap'. The political will to address the dire circumstance concerning housing, health and education, and with bi-partisan support, is encouraging. So is the fact that it will be underpinned by thorough consultation with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples about the issues they see as important and how we can address these issues together.

Advocates for resolution of the broad range of issues concerning National Reconciliation will be hopeful that the spirit of the Apology will pave the way for these issues to also be a focus of attention.

In November last year, when the Catholic Bishops joined with others in welcoming the new Government into office, they emphasised the importance of a fresh approach for Indigenous justice. With reference to the Northern Territory intervention, they said that that 'there is much more to be done to address fundamental causes of entrenched disadvantage and that this must be done in full consultation and cooperation with Indigenous communities.'

In particular they highlighted the following six areas for continuing action:

- tackling key causes of child abuse and poverty such as housing, poor employment opportunities, substance abuse and community breakdown;
- going beyond a law-and-order response to provide a full range of culturally appropriate support services to foster strong families and communities;
- respecting Indigenous culture and identity through full and genuine partnership with Aboriginal communities, Aboriginal leaders and Church and community organisations working with Aboriginal communities;

- providing adequate funding to secure these goals;
- paying attention to the concerns raised by Indigenous leaders and others about the compulsory land acquisition provisions in the Emergency Response laws;
- the decision to remove the permit system needs to be reconsidered because the removal has made Indigenous communities vulnerable to negative influences.

When they raised these issues last November, the Bishops said, 'The Emergency Response has had the support of both major political parties. We now urge the Federal Government to pursue the even more challenging task of addressing the underlying causes of disadvantage in our Indigenous communities. In this way the healing process required at the heart of our nation can be furthered.' (refer: <http://www.acbc.catholic.org.au/bishops/confpres/20071130684.htm>)

Let us continue our prayer and efforts to secure justice and dignity for our Indigenous sisters and brothers.

Prayer for Reconciliation

In the midst of conflict and division,
We know it is You
Who turns our minds to thoughts of peace.
Your spirit changes our hearts:
Enemies begin to speak to one another,
Those who were estranged join hands in friendship,
And nations seek the way of peace together.
Let Your spirit be at work in us.
Give us understanding and put an end to strife,
Fill us with mercy and overcome our denial,
Grant us wisdom and teach us to learn
From the people of the land.
Call us to justice.

PROJECT COMPASSION 2008 - 'JUST WANT JUSTICE: A CALL TO ACTION'. Project Compassion 2008 began on Ash Wednesday and ends on Easter Sunday 23 March 2008. During these six weeks of Lent, Catholic schools and parishes throughout Australia will receive and use educational materials aimed at broadening the way we view the world. The theme for Project Compassion this year is 'just want justice - a call to action'. In marking World Youth Day, this year's Project Compassion campaign also explores the role of young people around the globe empowering their communities and being advocates for change. To find out more and support the cause of reducing world poverty, visit: http://www.caritas.org.au/project\_compassion\_08/

POSTCARD CAMPAIGN - 'CLOSETHEGAP ON INDIGENOUS HEALTH'. Now is the time to show your support for the apology of 13 February and urge the Government to carry forward their promises. The Social Action Office of the Conference of Leaders of Religious Institutes, Queensland, has launched an e-card urging the government to allocate the additional $460 million (the amount recommended in the Oxfam CLOSETHEGAP campaign) in this year's federal budget to set up the action plan and programs to achieve better health outcomes for Indigenous Australians. There are 2 cards - one to the Treasurer, Wayne Swan, and the other to the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Jenny Macklin. To access the e-card, visit http://sao.clriq.org.au/indigenous\_issues.html or call (07) 3891 5866.

REQUEST - INDIGENOUS LANGUAGE CULTURE PROGRAM (Vic). The Victorian Aboriginal Corporation for Languages is looking for Aboriginal people in Victoria who can share knowledge of traditional Victorian Aboriginal languages as part of the Indigenous Language Culture Program at the Malmsbury Youth Juvenile Justice Centre. They are in need of community members from regional and metro Victoria who can work with youth to be confident in their heritage and their identity through their traditional languages. There is a fund to help community members attend meetings and visit the Malmsbury Youth Juvenile Justice Centre. For more information, contact Kooramyee Cooper or Alex Blaszak on (03) 9600 3811 or vacl@vaclang.org.au

CAMPAIGN - 'KEEP POWER IN OUR HANDS'. The Australian Fair Trade and Investment Network (AFTINET) is supporting a community campaign against NSW electricity privatisation. Responding to the NSW Government's plan to sell its electricity retail business and lease its power generating plants to private companies, Dr Patricia Ranald says that privatisation will not increase government income, it will mean that profits will come before the environment, and the government will have less ability to regulate a vital public service. Privatisation will mean higher prices for an essential service and the likelihood of more blackouts. The campaign website provides the means to send a message to the Premier and to get a petition to sign, and take to your family, friends and community group. Visit www.stoptheselloff.org.au for more information.

CELEBRATE INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

Catholic parishes are invited to celebrate International Women's Day on Friday, March 7 with the assistance of a kit filled with resources to help parishioners pray for all women who contribute to the Church through a great diversity of roles and tasks. The kit contains a parish bulletin notice and liturgy notes. In the homily suggestions by Bishop Michael Malone, the Chair of the Bishops' Commission for Church Ministry, we're reminded that the 'season of Lent encourages everyone to confront areas of injustice in themselves and their communities'. Included in the kit is a brochure entitled 'Decisions and Proposals of the Social Justice Statement 2000'. For more info contact the ACBC Office for the Participation of Women on 02 6201 9864.

CAMPAIGN - 'SAY NO TO VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN'

The United Nations Development Fund for Women is running this web-based campaign to stop violence against women. Nicole Kidman, UNIFEM Goodwill Ambassador, says 'the campaign counts on each of us to speak out by signing up. Now, the United Nations Foundation is counting too. It has issued a challenge: for each of the first 100,000 signatures to the campaign, the UN Foundation will donate $1 to the UN Trust Fund to End Violence against Women. We need everyone's help to get 100,000 people to sign on to the UNIFEM campaign so that $100,000 will be contributed to the Trust Fund for local initiatives working to prevent human trafficking, assisting survivors of domestic violence or helping implement laws against rape.' To sign on visit <http://www.saynotoviolence.org> or <http://www.unifem.org/campaigns/vaw/>
